(ac) the third country or international body concerned ensures an adequate level of protection for the intended data processing;

(b) the transfer is necessary for the purposes of this Directive specified in Article 1(2); and

(c) the third country receiving the data agrees to transfer the data to another third country only where it is necessary for the purposes of this Directive specified in Article 1(2) and only with the express authorisation of the Member State.

1a. Transfer of PNR data without prior consent in accordance with point (ab) of paragraph 1 shall be permitted only if such transfer is essential for the prevention of an immediate and serious threat to public security of a Member State or a third country or to essential interests of a Member State and the prior consent cannot be obtained in good time. The authority responsible for giving consent shall be informed without delay.

1b. By way of derogation from point (ac) of paragraph 1, personal data may be transferred if:

(a) the national law of the Member State transferring the data so provides because of:

(i) the legitimate specific interests of the data subject; or

(ii) legitimate prevailing interests, in particular important public interests; or

(b) the third country or receiving international body provides safeguards which are deemed adequate by the Member State concerned according to its national law.

1c. The adequacy of the level of protection referred to in point (ac) of paragraph 1 shall be assessed in the light of all the circumstances surrounding a data transfer operation or a set of data transfer operations. Particular consideration shall be given to the nature of the data, the purpose and duration of the proposed processing operation or operations, the Member State transferring the data and the country or international body of final destination of the data, the rules of law, both general and sectoral, in force in the third country or international body in question and the professional rules and security measures which apply.

1d. Member States shall transfer PNR to competent government authorities of third countries only under terms consistent with this Directive and only upon ascertaining that the use that the recipient intends to make of the PNR is consistent with those terms.

1e. Save in emergency circumstances, any such transfer of data from one third country to another shall take place pursuant to an express understanding incorporating data privacy protections comparable to those applied to PNR by Member States as provided for in this Directive.

1f. Where a Member State is aware that PNR data relating to a citizen or a resident of a Member State are being transferred to a third country, the competent authorities of the Member State concerned shall be informed of the matter at the earliest appropriate opportunity.

1g. When PNR data is being transferred to a third country pursuant to this Directive, the safeguards set out in paragraphs 1 to 1c shall be complied with.

2. Upon expiry of the period of 30 days after the transfer of the PNR data to the Passenger Information Unit referred to in paragraph 1, the data shall be retained at the Passenger Information Unit for a further period of five years. During this period, all data elements which could serve to identify the passenger to whom PNR data relate shall be masked out. Such anonymised PNR data shall be accessible only to a limited number of personnel of the Passenger Information Unit specifically authorised to carry out analysis of PNR data and develop assessment criteria according to Article 4(2)(d). Access to the full PNR data shall be permitted only by the Head of the Passenger Information Unit for the purposes of Article 4(2)(c) and where it could be reasonably believed that it is necessary to carry out an investigation

2. Upon expiry of the period of 30 days after the transfer of the PNR data to the Passenger Information Unit referred to in paragraph 1, the data shall be retained at the Passenger Information Unit for a further period of five years. During this period, all data elements which could serve to identify the passenger to whom PNR data relate shall be masked out. Such masked out PNR data shall be accessible only to a limited number of personnel of the Passenger Information Unit specifically authorised to carry out analysis of PNR data and develop assessment criteria according to Article 4(2)(d). Access to the full PNR data shall be permitted only by the Head of the Passenger Information Unit for the purposes of Article 4(2)(c) and where it could be reasonably believed that it is necessary to carry out an investigation and in response to a specific and actual threat or risk or a specific investigation or prosecution.

and in response to a specific and actual threat or risk or a specific investigation or prosecution. Such access to the full data shall be allowed for a period of four years after the data has been masked out in cases concerning serious transnational crime and for the entire period of five years in cases concerning terrorist offences.

Or. en

Justification

Data masking is the process of obscuring (masking) specific data elements within data stores so that the information is not available outside of the specific environment where it is handled, therefore decreasing the chances of exposing sensitive information and avoiding risks of leaking. Taking into account proportionality of retention periods, a distinction of possible access shall be made between serious transnational crime (4 years only) and terrorism (5 years) after the initial masking out of the data.

3. Member States shall ensure that the PNR data are deleted upon expiry of the period specified in paragraph 2. This obligation shall be without prejudice to cases where specific PNR data have been transferred to a competent authority and are used in the context of specific criminal investigations or prosecutions, in which case the retention of such data by the competent authority shall be regulated by the national law of the Member State.

3. Member States shall ensure that the PNR data are permanently deleted upon expiry of the period specified in paragraph 2. This obligation shall be without prejudice to cases where specific PNR data have been transferred to a competent authority and are used in the context of specific criminal investigations or prosecutions, in which case the retention of such data by the competent authority shall be regulated by the national law of the Member State.

Or. en

It should be clarified that the deletion is permanent except in cases specified above.

Member States shall ensure, in conformity with their national law, that dissuasive, effective and proportionate penalties, including financial penalties, are provided for against air carriers which, do not transmit the data required under this Directive, to the extent that they are already collected by the them, or do not do so in the required format or otherwise infringe the national provisions adopted pursuant to this Directive.

Amendment

Member States shall ensure, in conformity with their national law, that dissuasive, effective and proportionate penalties, including financial penalties, are provided for against air carriers which do not transmit the data required under this Directive, to the extent that they are already collected by them, or do not do so in the required format, or do not handle and process the data in accordance with the data protection rules laid down in this Directive and in Directive 95/46/EC, or otherwise infringe the national provisions adopted pursuant to this Directive.

Or. en

It is important that this Article covers both the way in which the data is handled and processed, as well as making clear that such a system would operate under existing legal data protection rules.

Amendment

Article 10a

Protection of personal data

1. Each Member State shall provide that, in respect of all processing of personal data pursuant to this Directive, every passenger shall have the same right to access, right to rectification, erasure and blocking, right to compensation and right to judicial redress as those provided for under national law in implementation of Articles 17, 18, 19 and 20 of Framework

Decision 2008/977/JHA. Those Articles shall therefore be applicable.

2. In the event of a privacy incident or breach (including unauthorised access or disclosure), national supervisory authorities shall take the necessary measures to notify affected individuals as appropriate, to limit the risk of harm resulting from unauthorised disclosure of personal data and information, and to put in place such remedial measures as are technically practicable.

3. Within the scope of this Directive, the national supervisory authority shall without undue delay inform the relevant Member State authorities about significant privacy incidents and breaches involving PNR data relating to Union citizens or residents resulting from accidental or unlawful destruction or accidental loss, alteration, unauthorised disclosure or access, or any unlawful forms of processing or use.

4. The national supervisory authorities of Member States shall confirm that effective administrative, civil, and criminal enforcement measures are available under Member State law for privacy incidents by the airlines, and shall make available information concerning such measures. Member States may also take disciplinary action against persons responsible for any such privacy incident or breach, as appropriate, such action to include denial of system access, formal reprimands, suspension, demotion, or removal from duty.

5. All data shall be held in a secure location, in a secure database, on a security accredited computer system, that either meets or exceeds international industrial standards.

6. PNR data must be monitored, sampled and audited in line with a statutory code of practice which must be developed by each Member State's supervisory authority, ensuring tight controls of the work of operators and the practical implementation of this Directive, and will form part of each Member State's review process.

7. Each Member State and each national authority shall appoint a data protection supervisory officer in order to ensure compliance with existing national and Union data protection law and fundamental rights; that person shall be trained and qualified to a high standard in data protection law.

Or. en

Justification

It is essential that passengers have the rights to redress, rectification, access, erasure and blocking, and the right to compensation and the right to judicial redress. Having clear rules on how Supervisory authorities, airlines, and Member States should operate regarding data handling, should ensure an effective operation which passengers can have confidence in.

National supervisory authorities having in place a disciplinary system for persons who operate the system is essential for passenger confidence in the PNR system.

Proposal for a directive
Article 12

Text proposed by the Commission

Each Member State shall provide that the national supervisory authority established in implementation of Article 25 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA shall also be responsible for advising on and monitoring the application within its territory of the provisions adopted by the Member States pursuant to the present Directive. The further provisions of Article 25 Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA shall be applicable.

Amendment

1. Each Member State shall provide that the national supervisory authority established in implementation of Article 25 of Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA shall also be responsible for advising on and monitoring the application within its territory of the provisions adopted by the Member States pursuant to the present Directive. The further provisions of Article 25 Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA shall be applicable.

1a. Compliance with the privacy safeguards contained in this Directive shall be subject to independent review and oversight by national supervisory authority officers who:

(a) have a proven record of autonomy;

(b) exercise effective powers of oversight, investigation, intervention, and review; and

(c) have the power to refer infringements of law related to this Directive for prosecution or disciplinary action, when appropriate.

The national supervisory authority officers shall, in particular, ensure that complaints relating to non-compliance with this Directive are received, investigated, responded to and appropriately redressed. Those complaints may be brought by any individual, regardless of nationality, country of origin, or place of residence.

1b. In particular, national supervisory authorities shall provide all individuals with an administrative means to resolve travel-related inquiries including those related to the use of PNR data. National supervisory authorities shall provide a redress process for individuals who believe they have been delayed or prohibited from boarding a commercial aircraft because they were wrongly identified as a threat.

Or. en

Justification

It is necessary for those that carry out the oversight and review of national supervisory authorities and for the authorities themselves to have the necessary powers in order to make sure that there are no breaches in the system, and that passengers remain fully informed of their rights, and that they are fully observed and applied.

Amendment 44

Amendment

Article 12a

Independent review

In addition, application of this Directive shall be subject to independent review, evaluation and oversight by one or more of the following entities:

(a) the European Parliament;

(b) the Commission;

(c) the Committee referred to in Article 14 of this Directive.

Such oversight may be manifested in the findings and recommendations of public reports, public hearings, codes of practice and analyses.

Or. en

Justification

It is important that there is scrutiny, from both the European Parliament and the European Commission, both of whom carry out different and complimentary functions. The establishment of an EU-PNR Data Protection Committee will bring specialist knowledge to the system's ongoing review and evaluation.

1. Member States shall bring into force the laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with this Directive at the latest three years after the entry into force of this Directive. They shall forthwith communicate to the Commission the text of those provisions and a correlation table between those provisions and this Directive.

this Directive, Member States shall ensure that the PNR data of at least 30% of all flights referred to in Article 6(1) are collected. Until two years after the date referred to in Article 15, Member States shall ensure that the PNR data from at least 60 % of all flights referred to in Article 6(1) are collected. Member States shall ensure that from four years after the date referred to in Article 15, the PNR data from all flights referred to in Article 6(1) are collected.

Or. en

Justification

Given the importance of the purpose for which the PNR data is collected and processed, as well as the varied, sophisticated and international nature of the threat posed, it is necessary to have a system which operates on a 100% collection basis both within the EU, and with third countries in order for the system to be fully effective.

Amendment

On the basis of information provided by the Member States, the Commission shall undertake a review of the operation of this Directive and submit a report to the European Parliament and the Council within two years after the date mentioned in Article 15(1). It shall also contain the statistical information gathered pursuant to Article 18.*

Or. en

Justification

5 years is a more suitable time period for assessment, given the period for Member States establishing a PNR system was set at 3 rather than 2 years.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

I. Background

The nature of criminal and terrorist activity has been constantly evolving in recent years. It has become more daring, more sophisticated and increasingly trans-national in nature. Given the vast cost of crime, evidence shows that citizens increasingly wish to see stronger action at EU level to tackle organised crime and terrorism.¹

In response to this, the Stockholm Programme called on the Commission to present a proposal for the use of PNR data to prevent, detect, investigate and prosecute terrorism and serious crime. On 6 November 2007 the Commission adopted a proposal for a Council Framework Decision on the use of Passenger Name Record (PNR) data for law enforcement purposes. The proposal was discussed in Council working groups and consensus was reached on a majority of the provisions in the text. However upon entry into force of the Lisbon Treaty on 1 December 2009, the Commission proposal, not yet adopted by the Council, became obsolete.

PNR data is information provided by air passengers in the course of ticket reservation which is held by air carriers. Its primary use by air carriers is for operational purposes (it contains information in 19 fields such as travel dates, travel itinerary, ticket information, contact details, travel agency details, means of payment used, seat number and baggage information) but it also has commercial and statistical value for the airlines.

PNR data can also be used by law enforcement bodies and the proposed Directive lays down harmonised rules for such measures. PNR data, when analysed carefully, can be an effective tool to identify and track criminal and terrorist activity. Furthermore, it can be used in a reactive, real time or pro-active way to intercept, monitor, investigate and prosecute criminals. Currently, of the 27 Member States of the European Union, only the United Kingdom has a fully fledged PNR system², whilst 5 others (France, Denmark, Sweden, Belgium and The Netherlands) use it in limited ways or are testing its use.

PNR should not be confused with Advanced Passenger Information (API) which is biographical information taken from the machine-readable part of a passport. This is more limited in scope and its use is regulated under the API Directive³.

II. Commission Proposal

The Commission proposal (henceforth "the text") takes into account the recommendations of the European Parliament as stated in its Resolution of November 2008⁴ and it reflects the state of discussions in the Council working groups in 2009. It also takes into account the opinions

² UK e-borders sections 32 to 38 of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006.

³ Directive 2004/82/EC of 29 August 2004 on the obligation of carriers to communicate passenger data (OJ L 261, 6.8.2004, p. 24).

⁴ Texts Adopted, P6_TA(2008)0561.

of the European Data Protection Supervisor (EDPS), the Article 29 Working Party on Data Protection and the Fundamental Rights Agency. Both a full impact assessment and a consultation process were carried out.

Principally, the text does two things: i) it harmonises the obligation for air carriers operating flights to and from third country and the territory of at least one Member State in the transmission of PNR data to law enforcement bodies, and ii) sets out the criteria for which law enforcement bodies may use such information, namely for the purpose of preventing, detecting, investigating and prosecuting terrorist offences and serious crime. The text complies with the rules laid down in Framework Decision 2008/977/JHA (or any other future Framework decision in this area) for the protection of personal data. The proposed system is mandatory giving each Member State two years in which to set up an operational system. However, Member States would be allowed to run joint systems for cost-sharing purposes.

Apart from the purpose limitation, which is mentioned above, there are several areas in which parliamentarians have traditionally focussed their interest:

I. Retention of data

The text sets out a two-stage approach to the retention of PNR data by the Member State's competent authority: namely a 30-day period, followed by a 5-year period where the data is masked out.

II. Centralised v. de-centralised system

The text sets out rules for a de-centralised system. The arguments for this are mainly to do with cost, but also the sensitive nature of a single location of a centralised system.

III. Inclusion of intra-EU flights

Intra-EU flights are not included in the scope of the text.

IV. Targeted v. 100% collection

The Commission proposes reaching 100% coverage of international flights in gradual steps.

V. Definition of terrorist offences and serious crimes

Under the text, "terrorist offences" refer to those in Articles 1 to 4 of Council Framework Decision 2002/475/JHA; and "serious crimes" are also defined with reference to "Article 2(2) of Council Framework Decision 2002/584/JHA, but only those punishable by a custodial sentence or a detention order for a maximum period of at least three years under the national law of a Member State", although some flexibility is allowed here.

III. Rapporteur's Position

Your Rapporteur agrees with the vast majority of the Commission's approach to the transmission and use of PNR data. The Commission and various member State law enforcement bodies have presented evidence to Members as to the effectiveness of such a tool and your Rapporteur contends the necessity, proportionality, and added value of such a measure has been shown: the measures do not impede free movement and should not jeopardise right of entry of citizens whilst at the same time helping to protect their safety. Furthermore, given that the Commission proposal has taken account of the recommendations made by the European Parliament in November 2008, and given that it sets minimum standards that have already been approved by the LIBE Committee with respect to other PNR Agreements the text provides a sound platform for discussion in this house.

I. Retention of data

Your Rapporteur does not believe that any changes need to be made to the text but his draft Report adds a definition of "masking out data" which clarifies the precise meaning of this provision. It also introduces two different periods for accessing the data - five years for terrorism and four years for serious transnational crime, taking fully into account the proportionality principle, in view of the ECJ joined cases C-293/12 and C-594/12.

II. Centralised v. de-centralised system

The draft Report sets out rules for a de-centralised system.

III. Inclusion of intra-EU flights

Your Rapporteur is convinced that the inclusion of intra-EU flights would bring clear added value to any EU PNR scheme. Although this would add to initial costs there are clear benefits to their inclusion: uniform set up and strong security advantages. Because of the increased scope of the scheme, your Rapporteur has also extended the lead in time for the proposal from 2 to 3 years.

IV. Targeted v. 100% collection

The Rapporteur supports 100% coverage of flights for the obvious efficiency and security benefits. There is also evidence to suggest that criminals could avoid particular flights under a targeted system.

V. Definition of terrorist offences and serious transnational crimes

The draft Report has not changed the definitions of "terrorist offence" and "serious crime" However, it limits the text to "serious transnational crime" only with a list of specific offences taken from the FD 2002/584/JHA list.

Your Rapporteur has also inserted provisions which will clarify the issue of cost, redress and has strengthened the legal certainty of the text by referring more explicitly to other legislation already in force in this area.
